May 14th 1897.

Dear Judge!-

Please accept my sincere and heart felt congratulations on your foreign appointment, of which I only learned last night! I trust that you all may thoroughly enjoy your life abroad, and that the same may result in great benefit to your health, as no doubt a residence in sunny France will do.

It has always been my opinion that no one in this country has ever earned a better right to public recognition, than you have, not only from a personal standpoint and great experience, but from your never ceasing efforts to keep the Republican party in the right path, and in your long fight for the lifting and bettering of a down-trodden race.

In leaving you will carry away with you the warmest and best wishes and regards of many friends and admirers in all parts of this country, but none more sincere than mine.

Were my mother not in New Jersey, I know she would join me in sending regards.

With love to all,
I remain,
Ever cordially and sincerely yours
