Dear Emma:

I am so disappointed in not getting any word from you in this morning's mail that I am almost sick over it - I have not even heard that you and Lodie are in this country - I see by the New York papers that the Philadelphia came into port Saturday morning - but neither you came did not know - I wrote you one of the address you gave in New York and also at Meyville — I can't find I know if you did come home full your hands and heart have been and I have thought of you almost constantly since the day of your sailing — I hope neither you or Lodie are ill and that you are safely arrived — if you are well and can I do hope you will come here as soon as you can and let us [illegible] [illegible] about this home — whether we go on or give it up I owe it to the people who are with me and who expect to spend the winter that they know the situation of things - I have triumphant - not to say anything as for as I did not want to unsettle them - except - to the Yankton who are staying temporarily Of one thing I am sure unless you are decided that you will make this your future home you do not want to be to the expense of sending your furniture here and we have the 25th of the month — It seems strange that you should not have received my letter telling you I had written the home Of course I had it direct — to London as you gave me that address after September 6th and your letter saying that the home was not received till about September 8th and as I wrote you the Cable never was received and I do not believe it was ever sent by the line company — Well dear, whatever comes of this I shall feel that I have done the best I could for the best interests of us both. Mrs. Patterson Mrs. Lake's niece who has had large experience here in homes & was here yesterday and went all over the home - She said "I do not think Mrs. Longfellow could have a better friend - for a home to work from if she wishes to make Washington home - ) than to move her goods into this home and then decide where and how she wishes it - for furniture could be sold at much better advantage here than in Maine if you want to dispose of any of it - I should think - I hope this matter will be settled soon or I shall get out of my mind - Sincerely Yours Bessie
